IS THE earth the only inhabited spot in the universe? This is the question which has engaged the attention of astronomers for all ages. When Galileo, 200 years ago, for the first time used the telescope, he revealed many more stars, and showed the nearby bodies of the solar system in greater beauty than with the naked eye. With each increase of telescopic power, the planets and moon were brought nearer, and afforded fruitful fields of investigation. The moon appeared to be covered with mountain ranges, the dark patches seemed to be water, and altogether it looked like a miniature earth. Was it a world, inhabited by thinking, human beings?

The first giant telescope was that made by Sir William Herschel, of England, in the latter half of the 18th century. This was a mammoth reflector of four feet in diameter. Herschel was gifted with wonderful eyes, he discovered the planet Uranus and many interesting stars and nebulae. Herschel turned his great telescope to the moon and examined it. After comparing the moon carefully with the earth, he thought that it certainly must be inhabited.

But the skies of England seldom gave him the opportunity of using the full power of his telescope, and in spite of his surmises, he could find no trace of the looked-for Lunarians, he could find no cities of theirs, or any other sure signs of human habitation.

Herschel's Studies.
When this great astronomer's son, Sir John Herschel, went to the sunny skies of the Cape of Good Hope, and carried with him a big telescope to examine the southern skies, the hope was revived that he might be able to discover the "Man in the Moon," and tell something of his life and customs. So when there appeared in the columns of the New York Sun, what purported to be, "Wonderful Astronomical Discoveries by Sir John Herschel," whereby it was shown that the moon had a vast population of human beings, the interest aroused was very great.

According to the Sun, wonderful discoveries in the art of casting and grinding glass for lenses, which had been kept a profound secret, had rendered possible the manufacture of a lens of the gigantic diameter of 24 feet. This lens was mounted with new mechanical devices which rendered the huge telescope easy of manipulation. In fact, so great was the light-gathering power of the 24 foot lens that a refined microscope was substituted instead of the ordinary eye-piece. This gave a magnifying power so great that the moon appeared but a few hundred yards away!

Moon's Secrets.
Sir John Herschel and his assistants had views of the moon that no human being had ever before had. Wonderful scenery was beheld; forests of beautiful green, seas and lakes of azure beauty and mountains of a solid crystalline. While gazing one night at the moon, the observers were electrified to find something moving on the moon. Upon focusing their telescope still better, it was found that the motion came from three large flocks of birds that flew across the landscape and alighted in plain view. On closer inspection, these birds looked very much like monkeys with huge bat's wings, and by their actions they showed that they were gifted with intelligence, the long-sought inhabitants of the moon. Their chief occupation appeared to be in eating large yellow fruit which they uncouthly devoured, but withal they were very polite, as they always picked the largest and best of the fruit and gave it to their neighbors.

The above account appeared in the Sun 75 years ago, and so great was the interest aroused that the edition was bought out almost as soon as it was on sale. It is now known as the "Moon Hoax," a splendid fabrication from beginning to end.

It is hardly necessary to add that we know that the moon has no man, there is no air on the moon, no water on the moon, and no life there of any kind or description. Since Herschel's time telescopes have been much improved. From the moon astronomers have turned to the planets and have asked, "Is Mars inhabited?" In the next few months this question will receive a great amount of attention, for already the ruddy planet has become very bright, and is each night gaining in brilliancy.

Comets.
Comet Kleiss, discovered at the Lick observatory early in July, has been a very interesting object. Early in August it was visible to the naked eye as a faint, small, foggy star. Unfortunately for observers in northern latitudes, the comet moved south rapidly, and at the middle of August was traveling south 7 degrees per day. The comet, however, became as bright as 3.6 magnitude. It is still visible in the southern hemisphere, but cannot be seen in northern climes.

Brooks's comet has returned and is a conspicuous object in a small telescope. Early in August it was plainly visible in the four inch finder of the 40 inch Yerkes telescope. By the first of September it promises to be readily visible to the naked eye. The comet is far north, as is shown by its position which follow for the hour of 7 p. m., eastern standard time:

August 25—Right ascension, 20 hrs., 34 min., 31 sec.; declination, plus 47 deg., 45 min.
August 27—Right ascension, 20 hrs., 20 min., 8 sec.; declination, plus 49 deg., 29 min.
August 29—Right ascension, 20 hrs., 4 min., 1 sec.; declination, plus 51 deg., 10 min.

The comet may be found early in September from the position in the constellation of Cygnus as given on the Sky Map.

Planets.
Mercury is at its greatest elongation west of the sun on September 20, and it then may be seen as a morning star, rising before the sun.

After months of great brilliancy, Venus has drawn near to the sun, which it passes at inferior conjunction on September 15. It then appears in the morning sky, but it will remain inconspicuous for another month. At the beginning of September, Mars rises shortly before midnight, but an hour earlier at the end of the month. At the first of the month its distance from the earth is 76,000,000 miles, which has decreased by 14,000,000 miles during the month. In this time the diameter has increased from 12 seconds of arc to 15. In a big telescope it is already a splendid object.

Jupiter is getting farther west each night. Its surface has been unusually interesting. The bands have been unpruned and full of detail. The "great red spot" seems to become more plainly visible, as if a haze covering were being removed. Jupiter is still well situated for study, with a small telescope. It is moving eastwards in the sky.

Saturn rises half an hour before Mars and is more brilliant than Mars. Its rings show plainly in a small telescope. On the third of the month it becomes stationary in the sky, then moves to the west, or retrogrades. It is readily found near the constellation Aries, rising about 10:30 p. m.

Uranus may be found from the position on the map, though it is difficult to see because of its great southern declination.

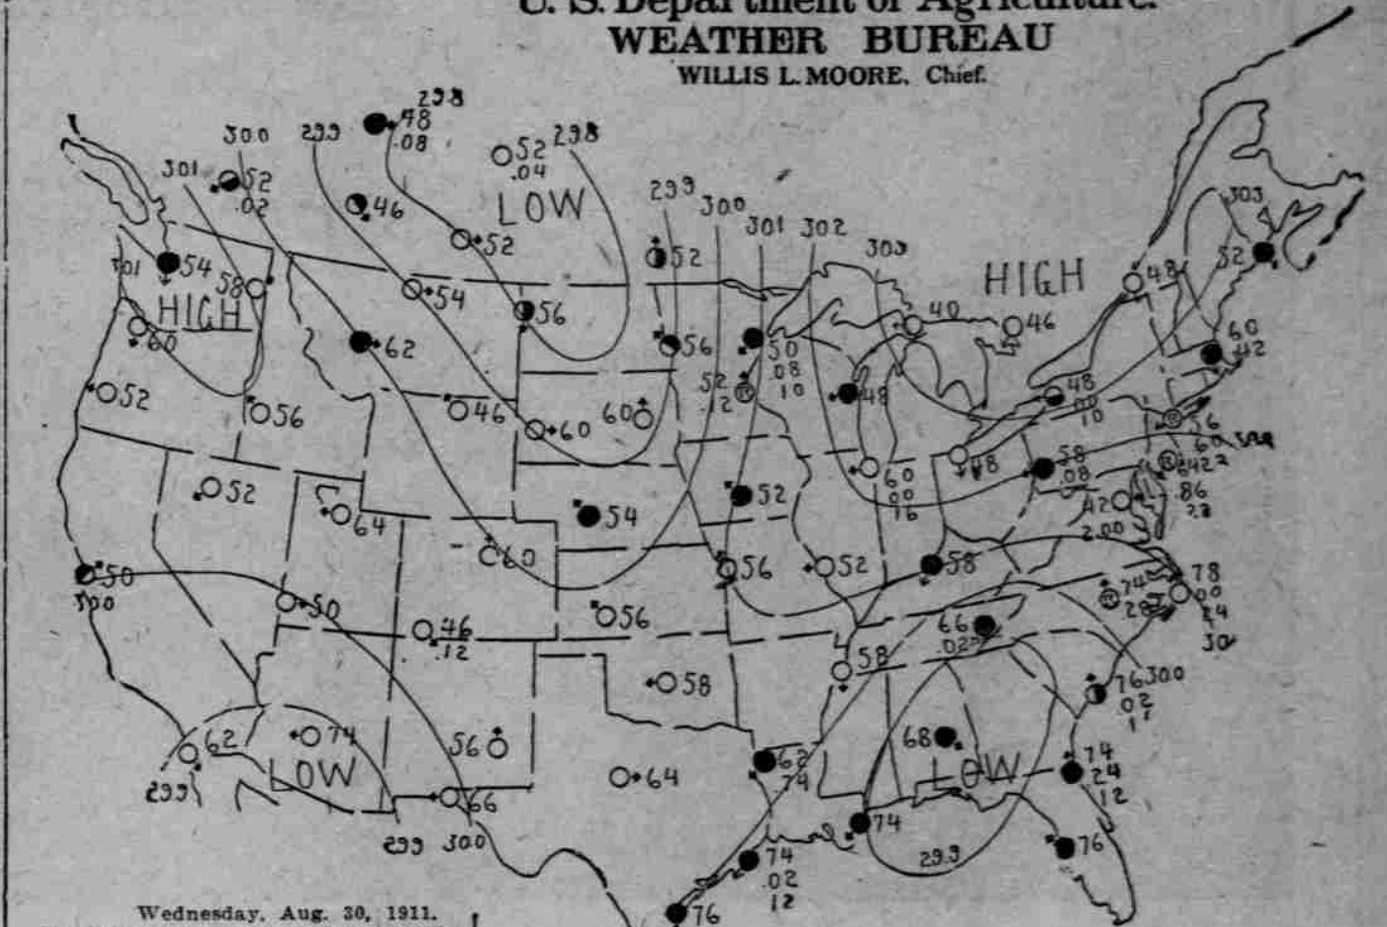

The sun is at the autumnal equinox on September 23 at 11 p. m., and fall begins.

CHENAULT GIVES BOND AT TRIAL

Tucumcari Treasurer Held to Grand Jury—Water Mains Shipped
Tucumcari, N. M., Aug. 30.—At an examining trial before Judge Winters, C. H. Chenault, ex-county treasurer, charged with shortage in his accounts, was held to the grand jury under $5000 bond.

Dr. H. D. Nichols, county health officer, was summoned to Quay because of a reported scarlet fever scare at that place. He found that there had been one death, a daughter of Dr. Boggs, of that place, and that another case was in the same family. There seemed to be little danger of the disease spreading, the last case not even being apparently of a malignant type.

Two false alarms of fire resulted from the lightning burning out connections during the rainstorm here. One came from a residence, the other from the grocery of Wofford and White. Water mains for the repair and extensions of the city water lines are on the road from Washington. There will be several shipments which will arrive about 10 days apart. Work will begin on the lines as soon as the material arrives.

DOWN COMES THE PLAZA BAND STAND

Old Frame Structure to Make Way For Comfort Station

With tears of regret, the unsightly old band stand in San Jacinto plaza will be torn down by orders of the park committee of the city council. The band stand was abandoned when the new stand in Cleveland square was built, and it has been used for nothing more useful than a retreat for hoboes in their flights through El Paso, and for housing the park caretaker's tools. The stand will be torn down to the level of the sidewalk, and vines trailed over it, leaving the base in the sky.

THIS IS CERTAIN

The Proof That El Paso Readers Cannot Deny.

What could furnish stronger evidence of the efficiency of any remedy than the test of time? Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills cure permanently.

Home endorsement should prove undoubtedly the merit of this remedy. Years ago your friends and neighbors testified to the relief they had derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. They say time has completed the test. Thomas Townsend, 418 N. Oregon St., El Paso, Tex., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as highly today as when I gave a statement for publication in their favor over two years ago. For some time my kidneys were weak and I was obliged to arise often during the night on account of an inability to control the kidney secretions. The use of one box of Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Kelly & Pollard's Drug Store, strengthened my kidneys and made a marked improvement. I have not had much trouble from my kidneys since then and consequently I am always willing to make the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills known."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

ment part for the use of the caretaker and for storing the flowers during the winter.

Bids have been invited by the park committee for the new comfort station which is to be erected in place of the old band stand. This comfort station will be in the form of a pergola and will be equipped with wash rooms for men and women, toilets and rest rooms.

S. S. S. cures every ailment which comes from impure or diseased blood, it tones up and regulates every portion of the system and creates an abundant supply of nourishing properties with which to build up the blood. S. S. S. is absolutely free from harmful drugs and minerals, and is therefore the purest and safest blood medicine for young or old. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Malaria, Blood Poison, and all other blood disorders. Book on the blood and any medical advice free. S. S. S. is sold at drug stores.
